

Lecturer in Health & Social Care (Management and Leadership)

Faculty of Health & Social Care

£36,532 - £43,622, Ref: 5624

Based in Milton Keynes

We are seeking to appoint a Lecturer in Health and Social Care to contribute to the work of the Health & Social Care Department. You will possess a strong academic background in management research and development (including leadership) and its application to health and social care.

Your immediate responsibilities will include contributing to course production in the area of health and social care management and leadership. You will need to be able to write materials for a range of courses within the health and social care awards and degrees and help to maintain existing courses and awards.

You will have: a first degree and research degree (PhD or equivalent qualification) in a relevant area; a sound academic understanding of management and leadership; an ability to write teaching materials both within and outside of your immediate area of expertise; an understanding of supported open and distance learning; the role of new technologies and a commitment to innovation within teaching; and, the potential to develop a research profile in your field.

The Faculty of Health & Social Care is one of The Open University's fastest growing and most vibrant academic units. This is an exciting time to join a vibrant department, characterised by its entrepreneurial, external focus.
