

Yale Information Society Project Fellowships for 2010-2011

The Yale Information Society Project (ISP) is now accepting applications for 2010-2011 ISP postdoctoral fellowships at Yale Law School. The Yale ISP resident fellowship is designed for recent graduates of law or Ph.D. programs who are interested in careers in teaching and public service in any of the following areas: law and innovation, media studies, Internet and telecommunications law, intellectual property law, access to knowledge, first amendment law, social software, digital education, privacy, cybersecurity, standards and technology policy, biotechnology and law, technology, and culture generally.

Information about applying is available at <http://yaleisp.org/?p=377>.

Applications for 2010-11 ISP fellowships must be postmarked no later than Feb. 1, 2010.